Counties declared for Individual Assistance

- President Donald Trump has approved the DeSantis administration's request that the Federal Emergency Management Agency provide individual assistance to eight counties in the Florida Panhandle that suffered damage from Hurricane Isaias.
- Trump approved the request for individual FEMA assistance for people in Bay, Escambia, Gulf, Holmes, Okaloosa, Santa Rosa, Walton, and Washington counties, according to a statement released by the federal agency.
- Florida Office of Insurance Regulation data show that as of Tuesday, 62,295 claims totaling more than $652.2 million had been filed with insurers following the Oct. 9 landfall of Isaias, a Category 2 hurricane that made landfall in Destin.
- Santa Rosa County leads the state among counties with the most Isaias-related claims, with 29,463 filed, followed by Escambia (19,274), Okaloosa (5,859), Walton (2,3490), and Bay (2,259) counties.
- The president earlier in the week approved for FEMA to provide assistance to repair public roads, bridges, buildings, and other infrastructure to 15 counties.

Declaration Request

Texas (July 2026 Flooding-Appeal)

- President Donald Trump pledged to provide more federal aid to Texas flood victims after the Federal Emergency Management Agency denied the state's initial request to help individuals recovering from widespread floods in July.
- The flooding swept through portions of southwest Texas and the Hill Country, which was still building back from another deadly flash flood a year earlier.
- Nim Kidd, chief of the Texas Division of Emergency Management, formally appealed FEMA's denial of individual assistance Tuesday.

October 30, 2026

- Kidd asked FEMA to reconsider its denial for 20 of 30 counties where individuals needed aid, including Kerr and Uvalde.
- By the state's count so far, this year's floods damaged 2,944 residences and small businesses — including 132 that were destroyed and 618 that suffered major damage, according to Kidd's appeal. At least three people were confirmed dead from the flooding.
- FEMA approved assistance to some local governments more than six weeks after the floods. The agency later denied the individual assistance.
