WSP USA FIELD SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

November 13, 2026

Nor'easter

Northeastern U.S.

- A strengthening nor'easter is lashing the region with more heavy rain and gusty winds across the Interstate 95 corridor in the Northeast.
- Meanwhile, higher elevations in Upstate New York and northern New England will see even more snow as more cold air spills south from Canada.
- The nor'easter follows a round of severe storms Thursday that generated nearly 50 storm reports, including several confirmed tornadoes, from Delaware to New York.
- Storms triggered flash flooding in New York City, particularly in residential neighborhoods in Brooklyn and Queens.
- Severe thunderstorms prompted a Tornado Warning near New York City's JFK International Airport, where 3.32 inches of rain made it the second-wettest November day on record.
- Places in Central New York, between the Adirondack and Catskill mountains, saw more than a foot of snow fall Thursday, with Hartwick, New York, which is just south of Cooperstown, tallying 12.5 inches of snow.
- Much of the Adirondacks, Green Mountains and White Mountains could receive 1–3 inches of snow. Similar totals are expected across the Catskills, with 3–5 inches possible in higher terrain.
- As the nor'easter pulls away, cold air sweeping across the relatively warm Great Lakes will trigger rounds of lake-effect rain and snow Friday into the start of the weekend.
